Robert Was Not Nominated.

The presence here at this time of Robert G. Ingersoll on Supreme Court business and the present prominence of Gen. John M. Palmer in Illinois politics recall an incident in their Mrs. Spinola's guest. The general will be assisted by his able staff of young bachelors from New York, consisting of Representative Covert. Col. Dunphy, Judge McCarthy and tinction during the war, and under the changed condition of parties succeeding that struggle trained for a number of years with the morrow at the Shoreham, but will resume her receptions on Tuesday of next week. Mrs. Gibson will be the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Gov. Jackson at Annapolis on seif too poor to accept the governorship, though he was ambitious and willing to go to the United States Senate. The then uncrowned Robert was serving as attorney general by appointment, and Palmer urged him to come out for governor, which The men of the Bowling club gave a theater party at Albaugh's on Saturday night to the and would not accept the nomination. The which in those days owned a controlling interest in the republican party, got onto his trail, and the convention was forced to give him the go by. As a result Gen. Palmer was nominated and what was worse in the mind of Ingersoll, accepted the nomination. Robert walked out the convention disgusted and held aloof from politics till his famous speech nominating Blaine in the Cin-cinnati convention of 1876. After that he returned to the aloof business, in which he has been engaged most of the time since. Palmer was elected. His term of office covered the Chicago conflagration season, when he had a little tilt with Gen. Sheridan over policing the city during its demoralization, but in many ways his administration was popular. In 1888 as democratic candidate for governor he was defeated by Private Joe Fifer to the modest tune of 5,000, and this year he is to be nomi-nated in state convention for United States Senator on the democratic ticket, but it is understood Mr. Ingersoll will not lend him much aid in what promises to be a battle royal.

Into this the landlord dropped a big English penny, whereupon the lock was released with a click and, having raised the cover, we filled our pipes with the tobacco lying loose inside. It was a crude but effective example of the nickel-inis always in the smoking room for the convenience of the guests who are out of tobacco and the pennies dropped in to secure a pipeful just about pay for keeping the supply undi-minished. 'I should think,' I suggested, that the box, once opened, all the tobacco might be extracted by some conscienceless vagabond. Your box isn't modern. It ought to be so contrived that only a limited supply could be obtained for each penny.' I don't think,' he responded, 'that the box has suffered much from dishonest users, and as for being modern, of course it isn't. That box has been in user in the part of the penns of the penn in use in this hotel for more than one hundred and fifty years, and is probably the forerunner of all the penny-in-the-slot machines now so common all over England, and America, too, as I understand.' The box was certainly battered and dusty enough to have been in use that length of time, and there seems to be no reason to doubt the landlord's statement with regard to it."

MONEY GOOD TO BUY THINGS. What the Coins of the Realm are Really Worth Intrinsically.

"Supposing that the business of manufacturing United States dollars of legal intrinsic value has been successfully prosecuted there would be no reason why other coins of this country should not be produced even more profitably in like manner by private industry."

This was the sum of what Mint Director Leech at the Treasury department had to say yesterday to a Star writer.

"The silver dollar" he remarked," is worth at present intrinsically three cents more than when it was first coined under the Bland act.

GOLD PIECES. "Thus it would appear that the government makes twenty-five cents on every silver dollar it coins and more yet on the three fractional silver pieces?"

"That is undoubtedly true; but so long as the government is the people and the people are the government, what is the odds? On the other hand every United States gold piece con-tains its full face value of gold, beside one-tenth of its weight in copper for hardening. It might appear that a person provided with suffi-cient capital could buy a great quantity of tendollar gold coins, separate the gold, take it to the mint to be recoined free of charge—as Uncle Sam is obliged to do it—and have the copper left over as so much gain. Unfortunately, however, there is a certain loss of gold in separating the metals, not to mention the expense of performing the operation, and so such a scheme could scarcely be managed. For turning ordinary old gold, not melted coin, into new-minted gold pieces the government charges two cents an ounce-not for the coining, but without any reference to her color.

Her personality was absolutely unknown in the matter. When she appeared there was some talk of a refusal to accommodate her on the part of the printers, but the names of the pressmen running the two presses that needed assistants were drawn from a hat and to Fred Johnson the girl was assigned.
He immediately tendered his resignation, but Capt. Meredith refused to accept it, recommending his dismisal instead. Printer Levy was the other man and he, too, demurred, with a threat of the same fate confronting him. This was on Saturday. WANTED EXPERIENCED SERVANT FOR GEN-
